

But that's a good thing. One of the hardest things about cancer is that no one understands what you're going through. That's why, in 1990, Cancer Council Victoria set up the Cancer Council Helpline. It's a one-stop support service staffed by experienced cancer nurses. They can answer questions, provide reliable information, as well as organise support - all for the cost of a local call. So if you're Victorian, and you're affected by cancer, there's now someone to talk to.
