

Chief Executive Officer

- A unique community leadership opportunity
- Strategically build on our reputation and intellectual assets
- Advance our commitment to research-grounded knowledge, care and cancer control

Cancer Council Victoria is an independent not-for-profit organisation that has been leading the cancer control effort since 1936.

With a workforce of 370 staff, dedicated to cancer control, we are the largest non-government provider of cancer research funds in Victoria.

We undertake three important aspects of cancer control - research, prevention, and support for people with cancer, their families and friends.

With the planned retirement of the current Director (CEO) in early 2011, Cancer Council Victoria is seeking to appoint an outstanding strategic leader as its next Chief Executive Officer. In this key role, you will lead an organisation whose individual program heads enjoy significant international reputations in their own right. This is a unique opportunity in an organisation committed to research and the application of new knowledge to cancer prevention and treatment.

The CEO is accountable to the Board for the implementation of the strategic direction of the Council in alignment with its vision, mission and values. The CEO will also advocate to government and other sectors to advance cancer control in Victoria. The CEO represents the Council in the public sphere to maintain our respected profile in the community and positive media presence.

Holding relevant tertiary qualifications, you may have demonstrated experience in responding to community-wide public health problems through your work in research, prevention, treatment, policy and program development and/or support.

A confident and approachable communicator, you will be politically astute. With a track record of leadership in health, you will have strong ethics and values consistent with those of Cancer Council Victoria.
